

Prehistoric Indian Village, 2,500 Years Old, Discovered

Archaeological News Service.
N. ARIZ.—Attention of the world has been focused on following substantiation of the fact that a prehistoric village inhabited 2,500 years ago had been discovered near San Xavier here.

The ruins believed to be the oldest in the south-west located by archaeologists by Indians. Fred Horn, N. Y., discovered the ruins called Dr. Cummings to them.

Months of an extensive excavation subsequently were uncovered.

Dr. Cummings at this group of villages, the ruins of the tribal dwellings, the Gila Indians' dwellings, he said, the structures of adobe, the varying in thickness, from five feet. Two of the found mounds had more story, it was indicated by the lower walls. Dr. Cummings said.

The ruins were found in the Dr. Cummings said, the ruins of a simple tribe of who lived and vanished.

centuries ago. There were fortifications to protect the villages from enemy attacks.

Much decorated pottery was found and taken to the state museum for analysis and classification. The motif, Dr. Cummings said, was "red on buff," a type characteristic of the region in centuries long past. A few urns and a number of complete ollas have been removed from the ruins.

Accept trouble as part of the day's experience and it won't appear so menacing.

Curiosity is also something that loses its edge with age.

What must you pay for the kind of car you would like to own? Can you get a car that is well built, fast, easy to drive and good to look at—for the price you want to pay?

Indeed you can—for in Pontiac you get so much for your money. It is an outstanding General Motors value.

For instance, if you owned a small car in the past, you will find you can buy the fine Pontiac today for about what that small car cost you. Yet what extra value Pontiac gives you!

One fine thing you get is a 60 h. p. motor that is smooth and quiet at all times. It is a large motor, and so does all you ask with ease. And you can trust it to work that way as long as you have the car.

Then you will get a fine new Fisher body which is built to shut out heat, cold, rain and noise. The seat springs are deep—the cushions soft. Real mohair and whipcord give the style and long wear you want for pride and lasting value.

You will find the Pontiac very comfortable to ride in. There are rubber cushions at 43 points in the chassis—a fine-car feature which takes up most of the road shocks. Also there are four hydraulic shock absorbers to add to your comfort.

The first time you put your foot on the brakes you will know that they work surely and with great ease.

Your friends will say that Pontiac's lines and color and finish make it a car to be proud of. People will turn to watch it as you drive by. You will feel that you have bought fine-car value at a very low cost.

Of course you may say that we think more of our car than you might! Then why not drive the Pontiac and find out just how well it lives up to what we say about it? Any Oakland-Pontiac dealer will be glad to let you take a Pontiac out on the road, whenever you are ready to make the test.

odd sort of a prelude to it.

The United States supreme court has held the Langmuir high vacuum tube patent of the General Electric company invalid. The decision may bring joy to the independent manufacturer, but it will afford no relief to the listeners-in from the air assaults of the crooners, the exemplars of ancient alleged wit, and the movie stars devoid of singing voices.

"Manslaughter" was the verdict returned by a jury in Portland, Maine, against a young man who attempted to kiss his girl companion while driving his car at a speed of fifty-five miles an hour with the result that it skidded, crashed into a tree and killed her. Demonstrations of affection should be limited to a far lower time schedule.

The group of American mayors at present touring France unctuously broke into "Where Did You Get That Hat?" when the mayor of Deauville appeared wearing a green bowler.
The suggestion of a well-known jester, that a fund be raised to bring the touring city executives home at once, is worthy of consideration.

Ten million dollars in United States gold coin reached New York City this week from Buenos Aires as a part of the Argentinian program to support the peso. Argentina pulls off a revolution occasionally, and as a matter of fact one may be brewing down there now, but it is evident that she proposes to protect her credit, just the same.

The chief of the District of Columbia police again insists that there are no gangs in the national capital. Relatives of the victims of street shootings in Washington may have the consolation of knowing that their dead were not the victims of gangsters, but merely fell before the assaults of individual murderers—if there is any consolation in that.

Not One in a Million.

Not one man in a million would want to spend a million dollars in the way Dr. John M.
Glenn did. Consequently, he was the one man in a million capable of taking complete charge of the Russell Sage foundation, established in 1907 by Mrs. Sage, one of the world's most enlightened philanthropists, in memory of her distinguished husband. Dr. Glenn was entrusted, not with one million, but $15,000,000 to spend as he pleased. He has acquitted himself of his responsibility eminently well. Due to his administration, the Russell Sage foundation is ranked as one of the world's outstanding sources of the means for social study and advancement. It is not only money that has been furnished under Dr. Glenn's supervision, but enlightened advice and active guidance as well.

Mrs. Sage, who died in 1917, could have requested no better reflection of her own extraordinary philanthropic principles than has been mirrored in the administration of the Russell Sage foundation.

Dr. Glenn has resigned, at the age of seventy-two, happy in the belief he has fulfilled the foundation's intent during his term of service.
That intent is a hard measure of ability. It is:

"Dissemination of knowledge about conditions with the belief that, once they are known, they can be corrected. Investigation and propaganda with a remedial and preventive objective."

Not one man in a million would know how to meet such broadly comprehensive terms.
Not one man in a million would have the social perspective to conceive of millions of dollars in terms of social service. Dr. Glenn has done these things and more. His reward, if he claims one, lies in the knowledge of the good he has been enabled to do by his administration of the Russell Sage foundation.

If You Were a State Employee.

The gap between the state's income and its expenses rarely is closed. At the moment, the assembly is trying hard to keep it from opening so far that contact will be lost entirely.

The finance committee of the house advocates a horizontal reduction of ten per cent. In the salaries of state employees whose wages are not fixed by statute, as part of the attempt.
It is becoming more plainly evident every day that reduction in expenses will have to follow reductions in revenues to keep the two within sight of each other.

The state employees are protesting, naturally.
They are reminding the committee that the action it advocates is contrary to the theory of well-known economists and is bad business for the state. The committee members respond that it is their duty to balance the state budget, and it is going to be balanced whether the state employees like it or not.

If you were a state employee, you would protest as loudly as the most vociferous of them against a wage reduction when all theory is to the contrary. And if you were a legislator you would insist that the only way to keep expenditures from growing greater than income is to cut the former or increase the latter.

Taxation legislation, now pending, is designed to increase the state's income. No one dares hope, however, that it can be increased enough to balance the budget as it now stands. Expenses must be cut, whether it is pleasant or not. Theories as to what should and should not happen to wage levels are quite likely to fall sacrifices to necessity during the process.
It is urged that everything possible be done to make wage-cutting only a last resort, but citizens of the state can not deny their representatives in Columbus the right to do that which they would do themselves under the same circumstances.

For a Civic Spirit.

An unnamed citizen of St. Louis, Missouri, has established a fund from which a prize of $1,000 is to be given annually to the resident of Greater St. Louis who "has contributed the most outstanding service for its development, or shall have performed such services as to bring honor to the community."

A capable committee has been named to administer the fund and determine prize winners.
All St. Louis people are invited to submit the names of candidates, in the hope that no worthy person will be overlooked. The contribution of the applicant for the award may be in the "field of literature, education, music, journalism, invention, business, government, community work or any other human endeavor."

Announcement of such a fund would be good news in any city. The annual prize is not great, but it would have inestimable value as a symbol of achievement—a symbol that would command respectful attention from every citizen of the city. Cities lack not for impressive buildings and physical mass; it is only infrequently, however, that there is any attempt to add to their spirit. True civic greatness, obviously, is a matter of individual excellence.
Anything that encourages it is to be commended, therefore.

There are, perhaps, hundreds of "unnamed" citizens who seek a way to help their communities by wise allocation of the wealth they have amassed. No better use for money could be found than encouragement of those who bring honor to their cities by outstanding service.

Yes, Isn't It?

If you think your pay checks too small a return for your services the peculiar case of P. G. Wodehouse, English writer, should interest you.

Mr. Wodehouse has worked in Hollywood one year. He touched up the dialogue in two scenarios, worked on a story that never was produced and received $104,000 for it.

"Isn't it amazing," inquires Mr. Wodehouse, "they were extremely nice to me, but I feel as if I have cheated them."

So if you're worried about the proportions of your pay check—whether it is too large or too small—Mr. Wodehouse's case should interest you. He has the money, the moving picture company has a play it may never produce and the prestige of being the employer of P. G.
Wodehouse, and the public has moving pictures in about the same form as usual. The moving picture company wishes it had its money back, the author wishes he had the year back, and the public, upon whom the company and the author depend, wishes that there weren't foolish people to mess up orderly, fair procedures so hopelessly and the stockholders in the film company well their remarks aren't exactly printable.

If you're worried about your own pay check, then, it should be consulting to know that you don't need to feel you've cheated any one Comforting? Yes, isn't it?

President James A. Farrell, of the United States Steel corporation, says the worst of the economic depression is over and that business activity is returning. We hope he's right about it, but to be on the safe side, let us not kill the fattest calf prematurely.

A Lush Season.

Take a turn through the countryside. Stroll over to see your neighbor's garden if you haven't one of your own. Notice the lawns and shrubbery.

This is a lush season. The ground is over-run with plants, vines and grass. The foliage on the trees is full, so rapid has been its growth.
The wheat is knee high. Radishes are full-rounded, and lettuce is crisp and sweet. Roses and peonies blush brazenly and daisies are nodding. About everything there is a pronounced tone of luxuriant growth and extraordinary condition.

It wasn't this way last June. Seeds were buried dormant in the burning ground. The bright faces of the flowers were pinched from lack of water. Wheat fields, arrested in their customary rapid early development, seemed utterly discouraged. There were burned places in the lawns and grass in the meadows was sparse and lean. Stock moved rapidly in its search for grazing spots and crowded closer about muddied watering places.

That was drought. This is June, a little chilly so far, but the kind of growing season June is expected to be. Don't fail to enjoy it for what it means to the nation and to yourself.

Editorial Opinion.

PATERNALISM AND DIET.

Some of the less conspicuous foibles of paternalism in government are well illustrated in the meat packers' reaction to what the average person would regard as an innocuous radio speech broadcast by the public health service. The speech, or statement, furnished for broadcasting and presumably used to fill in a few idle moments when the vast unseen audience was yawning between a jazz orchestra and a symphony concert, contained the advice that "meat is an active heat-producing food, as shown by the fact that natives of the Far North live entirely on animal products, and therefore, the amount of meat eaten during the hot season should be less than that eaten during the colder months."

Which, with the depression and all, makes the meat packers see red. They have protested to the public health service and they have protested to the department of agriculture. And partially to appease the protesters, the department of agriculture has referred to one of its own publications, or statements, or radio address, or something of the sort, in which it has frequently pointed out the high food value of meats, especially of pork, and advised the millions that in hot weather pork products are often found particularly useful on picnics.

Natives of the Far North live entirely on animal products because meat is a heat-producing food, or because there is a lack of vegetable products? Is meat shown to be a heat-producing food because the natives of the Far North eat a lot of it, or because scientific research proves it? Breathes there a man, a man or child, who, sitting down before a juicy steak or succulent roast while the thermometer is hitting the high spots in the shade, pushes away his plate because the public health service has been broadcasting "Hotweather Hints"?
Does anybody really pay so much attention to radio speeches that his diet and his mode of living are changed in accordance with the advice thereby received? Have the packers really been hurt by governmental advice to ease up on meat, and if they have, is it the business of the government to give advice on food, or to keep quiet and watch the taxpayers squirm with indignation? And if it is the business of government to give dietary advice, should the advice be confined to how much meat to eat?
How about candy in hot weather? How about ice-cream sodas? What have you to say, Mr.
Public Health Service Radio Broadcaster, about peanuts at the ball park, not to mention soda pop?

It is all rather silly, of course, but it shows how easy it is for Uncle Sam to put his foot in it and how hard, once he has done it, to draw it out again.—Washington Star.

A GREAT ROUND-TRIP FLIGHT.

When Charles Scott landed at Lympne in a fifty-mile wind the other day, eleven days out from Wyndham, West Australia, he capped a splendid record with another one. On the outward journey he flew from England to Port Darwin in nine days, three hours and forty minutes, bettering the time of that wonderful distance flier, Air Commander Kingsford-Smith, by more than nineteen hours. On his return trip Scott cut Kingsford-Smith's time by forty-eight hours. Interesting things are said of Scott in the British magazine, "The Aero-plane."

At twenty-four, it seems, he was as likely as an aviator to lead the old country—powerful physique, six feet one inch in height and scaling thirteen stone. He had already seen more of the world than most men in a lifetime. He held his first mate's ticket, had sailed his nine-ton cutter across the North sea, navigated many foreign waters and spent a couple of years in the West Indies. He had just completed five years with the R. A. F. as a flying officer.

Flying once in South Australia, Scott crashed on a mountainside. Although he had a broken jaw and other injuries, he tramped three miles and brought back aid to his unconscious mechanic before he would take treatment himself.
While he was flying the monotonous mail run from Cloncurry to Camooweal he studied the natural conditions of night flying and was able to record them in a striking description.—New York Times.

When Baby Cries.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

One of the favorite stunts of the cartoonist is to picture the wailing child, keeping its parents busy at night. He shows the mother or father pacing the floor and madly praying for the crying to stop.

Such pictures speak the truth, even though they are considerably exaggerated. At any rate they teach a lesson which may be applied today.

A child should not be taken out of the crib merely because it cries. If the baby sleeps lightly, wakens often, there is a reason for it.
The thing to do is to find the cause and correct it.

When the baby is uncomfortable at night, it may be because of overexcitement during the day. It may have played too vigorously or too roughly, late in the day.

Overexcitement should be avoided at all times. Regardless of the age of the child, overstimulation is a bad thing. It is certainly advisable that after four o'clock all play be quiet and restful, rather than exciting.

Frequently, the child will be disturbed at night because he is wet and cold, or too warm.
Something may be annoying him, as a misplaced pin or wrinkled bed clothing.

Make a careful examination before leaving the child for the night. Make sure it is not lying in a cramped position.

If the child is restless, it may be because the diaper is too tight. Make the necessary adjustments, but do not take the child from the cub. Don't provide material for the proverbial cartoon illustrating the parents as he walks the floor.

The child's bedroom, just as the adult's room, should have plenty of fresh air. The room should be quiet. No light should shine on the baby's eyes. The child should be well covered and protected from draughts.

When the baby is restless every night and not sleeping well, a cool bath or a warm one, depending upon the weather, will promote sleep. During the summer months, a tub bath just before bedtime will give great relief.
As a rule, most young mothers are over-anxious. They hate to leave the child alone.
Please remember that if the baby has been properly fed and diapered, if the bed is properly adjusted, the windows and lights taken care of, the child may be and should be left alone.

Permit the child to go to sleep by itself.
Never go back merely because it cries. Once you do so, the child will expect it of you and will cry again.

Young's Theory of Light.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

Today, when the study of light in all its manifestations is recognized as of the highest importance, the name of Thomas Young is often mentioned because of his notable formulation of the undulatory theory of light. In our time, the late A. A. Michelson has made notable contributions to the study of light, and was probably the leading authority on the subject at the time of his death. Einstein has made light-velocity a leading feature in his "Special Relativity" theory, assuming it to be a constant for all inertial systems. The fundamental element in Young's theory is the ether, which Einstein regards merely as a medium for the transmission of energy, without any particular significant attributes.

Thomas Young was a scientist of a very profound intellect. Indeed, it is not exaggeration to say that he was far in advance of his day. For example, in the effort to prove that light was produced by chains of waves, he resorted to the phenomenon known as Newton's rings. This aroused for some reason the ire of Lord Brougham, who made a caustic attack upon Young in the Edinburgh Review.
Fortunately for Young, the famous Fresnel resumed Young's researches and made the same discoveries, so that Lord Brougham was discredited and Young brilliantly triumphed.

Thomas Young was born at Milverton, in Somersetshire, England, on June 13, 1773, the son of Quaker parents. He showed an extraordinary aptitude for languages at a very early age; and it is said that at fourteen he was able to translate parts of the Bible into no fewer than fourteen different languages.

When he came of age he went to London to study medicine, completing his medical education at Edinburgh and Göttingen. In 1801 he was appointed professor of natural philosophy at the Royal Institution, and the following year was elected foreign secretary of the Royal society, a position he held for the remainder of his life.

In the field of optics, his most brilliant discoveries were made. He is the first man to give a true description of the cause of astigmatism as well as a statement of the optical constants of the human eye. It has been generally conceded that he deserved the title accorded him, of the founder of the science of physiological optics.

Young's fame chiefly rests upon his formulation of the undulatory theory of light, and the experiments he carried out to demonstrate it. He was in line with Huyghens, who was first to advance the theory that the sensation of light was due to the imprint upon the eye of minute waves; and in opposition to Newton, who thought that the sensation of light was due to inconceivably minute particles of matter impinging upon the retina. By his principle of interference it is now believed that Young satisfactorily demonstrated his theory.

It was said by Helmholtz that Young's mind was one of the most profound and the world has ever produced. After a life of distinction as a physician, a scientist, he died on May 10, 1829, at Chiswick, 1931, International Feature Service, Inc.

No Strict Interpretation.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

The acts of congress taken relative to the Northwest territory as organized under the ordinance of 1787 show that that body looked upon the ordinance as merely outlining the policy to be pursued in the treatment of the territory, in a general way, and not as requiring slavish compliance with details.

For instance, the ordinance provided that congress should create out of the territory not more than five states, not less than three. As a matter of fact, five full states and part of another were made out of the territory. Not only do Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin lie wholly within it, but a considerable portion of eastern Minnesota was taken from the territory. About a third of Minnesota's territory in fact belonged to the old Northwest. Its capital, St. Paul, is in this territory, since it is on the east bank of the Mississippi.

Article 5 of the ordinance defined the boundaries of the states that should be made out of the territory, and these were followed when the states were admitted in only a general way.

It was also stipulated that any section of the territory to be admitted as a state must have a population of not less than 60,000. But in the case of Ohio, no attention was paid to this. At least, it is not known that the Ohio territory contained that requirement of population, and no ascertainment of the fact was waited for. The same was true of Michigan.

And even slaves whose ownership came down through treaty agreements between France and England and between England and the United States, were, as we have seen, not interfered with, in spite of the anti-slavery provision of the ordinance.

fast dishes one morning when he heard a knock at the door. Such an occurrence was so unusual that at first he did not answer, telling himself that he had imagined the sound. But when the knock came again—hurried and imperative—he went quickly, disheveled in hand, to the door.

It was Harriet alone and greatly disturbed. She had never before come to Antonio's home, and he, for a moment, could only stand and wonder at her presence.

"Forgive me for coming," she said hurriedly, "but I must talk with you at once."

Without a word he drew aside for her to enter. She stepped into the room and could not but notice the household evidences of his poverty and loneliness. As he stood there, disheveled in hand, in that bare, cheerless apartment, Harriet Noel forgot her mission. Her eyes filled with tears.

Impulsively she exclaimed, "Oh, Tony, dear, I am so sorry. I—I did not realize."

For a moment Antonio Latour faltered, then smiled reassuringly and with an air of self-possession as he had ever affected on the stage, placed a chair for her. When she was seated he asked with grave concern, "What is it, Harriet? What can I do for you?"

When she could speak, Harriet answered, "It is Bruce, Tony—Bruce Carey."

"Yes," said Antonio slowly, "I remember Bruce."

"He is here," she cried, "here in Orchard Hill. He came to see me last night. He says Roy Donovan sent him to me and told him that I would give him a home and send him to school with my Pierre. What shall I do, Tony? What can I do?"

Then, for the first time, Harriet told Antonio about her life with Roy Donovan and the boy, Bruce, and how from her child's infancy they had bullied Pierre and made him fear every one but his mother. After Donovan and Bruce had gone away, she had been able to overcome, in a measure, this early influence on her son's character, but she feared that if she took Bruce into her home now, the older boy would reassert his dominion over her little son.

"Why," she exclaimed, "last night before Bruce had been in the house an hour he ordered Pierre to give up his room to him because he, Bruce, wanted it for himself. And Pierre was ready to yield without protest, just as he used to do. Do you understand—do you realize, Tony, what such an influence might mean to a nature so sensitive as Pierre's?"

Yes, Antonio understood. But when he told her that for Pierre's sake she must not think of trying to raise the Carey boy with her own son, woman-like, she suddenly began to view the case from the other side.

Bruce Carey was an orphan. The poor boy was not to blame for his ways—Roy Donovan's influence was to blame. Surely now that Donovan was eliminated she could control the situation. She would love to help the homeless boy if she could. Perhaps it might even be better for Pierre to grow up with another boy—an older brother, as it were.

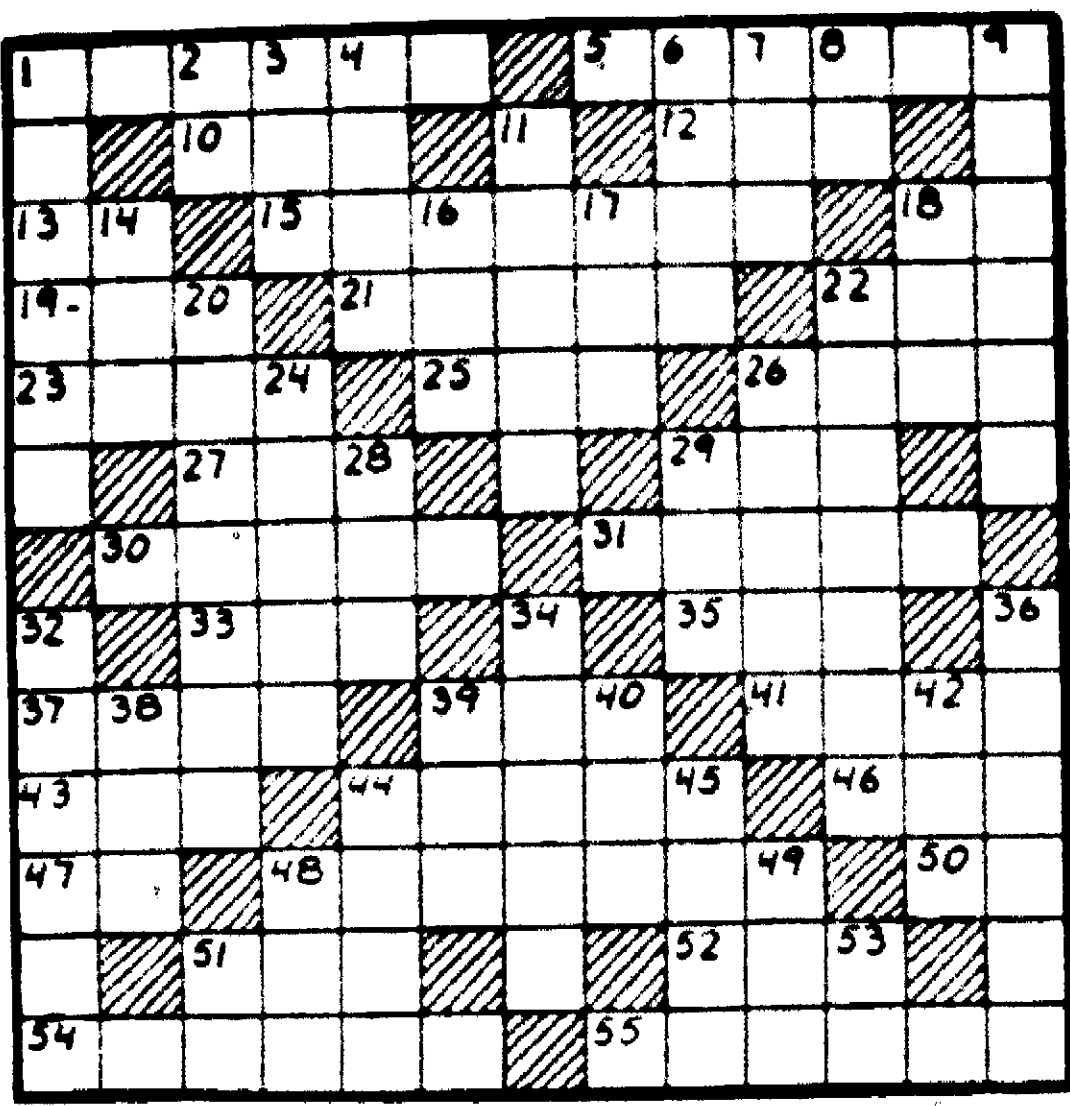

So Bruce Carey entered again into the pattern of Pierre's life. To Be Continued.

"Heart of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Pulls a Master Stroke.

CURIOUSLY enough, at Dicky's sneering comment that I was "getting to be as popular as a 'prom-trotter,'" the quick resentment I felt was not directed against him, but against Philip Veritzen whose name, I knew, was signed to the telegram which had been the immediate cause of his remark.

Save for Dicky's reference to "Faithful Fido," with his royal apology following so closely afterward that I could not hold any rancor for the utterance, I had had no occasion to resent any rudeness of his since the memorable night—last Christmas Eve—which had marked my last encounter with Philip Veritzen.

The months intervening between that night and the advent of our baby daughter had been a time of idyllic happiness for me, unmarred by the intrusion of any consideration outside my family. No one in the world can be more wonderful than Dicky in gentleness and devotion, and, doubly pleased by the promise of a little daughter—for he never had admitted any other possibility, and by the end of my "engagement" in Philip Veritzen's organization, he had been a royal lover indeed.

Not for all those months had I heard the unpleasant sneering tone in my husband's voice which had marked his utterance of the expression "prom-trotter." I knew, of course, what had brought it there. The telephone operator had given him the name signed to the telegram, and he had wished to telephone to us, and that had been the reason for his refusal to listen to the message or even to wait long enough to hang up the receiver of the downstairs phone.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD M. LEWIS

WEDNESDAY, and when I got out of bed this morning and looked in the looking glass, or the piece of one that I have nailed on my wall to look at the ted wollop under my ear where the yellow jacket landed, Jubilee laid on the bed looking at me with head turned sideways. I bet he thought I was looking to see if I was getting whiskers. Dogs aren't so very little. I was looking at my sting, but I didn't notice any whiskers. I got his rope and let him down and put on my short britches and went down, and when I was taking down the milk pail I noticed the bottle of coal oil my mother keeps for cleaning around the kitchen and I took it out and poured about half of it in the yellow jacket's hole. I don't want to be mean even to a yellow jacket, but I don't want them to be living around where they can sock their stingers into my kid sister.

I bet the coal oil went pouring in on them before they got out of bed. But one of them had been out all night and he was just getting home. I was bent over with my pants tight behind me, when my mother came to the back door and said, "What in the world are you doing, Thomas Aristides?" And just then the yellow jacket that was coming home landed on me and I yelled "WHAT!" My mother said, "Come here to me, sir," and when I got over to the bottom of the step she said, "What do you mean by speaking to your mother in that tone of voice?" I told her that it she had got what I got she would have yelled louder than what I did, and then I told her about the yellow jacket and she laughed and told me to wash the oil off my hands before I milked the cows. That yellow jacket must have been mad about something, but I certainly know how Feeble felt when she got over their nest. When the bunch came I didn't tell them about it. A fella shouldn't tell everything.

After we got out to the pasture the girls wanted to go down to the lake so we all went down to the breakwater and there were so many people sitting on each side of it fishing that their fishpoles made it look like a thousand-legged worm as far out as we could see. We walked away out to the end of it and there was my grandfather with a pole and a bucket of minnows and the fish were biting and he was having a good time. He was telling an old man sitting next to him smoking a pipe that I was his grand, and just then the man got a big bite and he yanked a big lawyer out and away up in the air and it swung back and hit him on the face and he almost swallowed his pipe. A lawyer is like a yellow cat only it hasn't any horns and it is no good, and the man blamed my grandfather because my grandfather was talking to him and taking his mind off his fishing, so then we went to the vacant lot and played ball.

Herewith is the solution to yesterday's puzzle.

THE NEW FORD SEDAN. Longer, wider, better.

SOME weeks ago we published an account of a Ford that had been driven 73,000 miles in less than a year by three mail carriers in Iowa.

The article created much comment and brought many letters telling of the unusual reliability, economy and long life of the Ford. Here is an interesting letter from the editor of a newspaper in Kansas.

"In one of your recent advertisements in weekly newspapers you tell of a Ford that has been driven 73,000 miles in less than a year.

"That's no mileage at all for a Ford. There is a Ford in this community that was driven 120,000 miles before it was traded in.

"The car was bought in August, 1928, and driven until November, 1930, by its owner. He is a carrier for the Wichita Daily Eagle, and has driven 150 miles daily since then."

of the route is over paved streets—the rest is on rough dirt and gravel streets through three small towns.

"Operating and repairing costs were exceptionally low. The car was traded in for a new one."

that it was a good car."

RAIN STOPS FIGHT OF PAT REDMOND AND ITALIAN BEHEMOTH

Bout Postponed Until Next Monday at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn.

BULLETIN
NEW YORK, June 16.—Rain today caused the postponement of the 10-round heavyweight match between Primo Carnera of Italy and Pat Redmond of Ireland. Promoter James J. Johnston announced the bout would be held next Monday night at Ebbets field.

By The Associated Press
NEW YORK, June 16.—Weather permitting, Primo Carnera and Pat Redmond, two large heavyweights, will entertain an expectant crowd in Ebbets field, Brooklyn, tonight. Ten rounds of the two behemoths, growing an aggregate of 610 pounds, will travel unless one of the other connects with a finishing punch that ends the matter more abruptly.

Carnera is six feet seven inches tall and weighs 260 pounds, according to the best available estimates. Redmond is a mere pigmy of six feet four inches and weighing 250 pounds. He will be the favorite for Redmond has done all his fighting in the smaller clubs and never has fought a battle of more than six rounds.

Other heavyweight duels on the card bring together Ernie Schauf and Jack Gagnon, of Boston, Harold Mays of Bayonne, N. J., and Walter Cobb of Baltimore, Tom Kirby of Boston, and Ted Sandwin of Sioux City, Ia.

Here and There at the Races

By Bob Kirkpatrick
The use of the new barrier system of starting inaugurated locally yesterday is a decided improvement over the former method of starting the races. It saves time and saves temper. Scoring is always annoying to say the least both to the horses and the spectators. Now that I care about the horses.

For a while before the opening of the first race it looked like the racing association might be putting on one of these little private shows—just for the wife and kiddies. The stands were nearly empty and it looked like they were going to start that way. Wrong again as usual. They started filling about 10:15 and before the first event started there were nearly 1,000 in the grandstand.

Quite a large number of the spectators were ladies, in fact a majority. It must be the depression that causes ladies to jump at the chance to save money. They were admitted free. Today they have to "kick in." It will be interesting to note the percentage of the "fairer sex" present at today's events.

The broadcasting system worked to perfection on the first day. With Steve Phillips manning the mike there was no difficulty in hearing the race of all the races. The music between the events wasn't bad and there were visions of Rudy Vallee as the Maine Steiner. Song was reproduced for the spectators' benefit.

The track is expected to be somewhat faster today. Recent rains had left it somewhat heavy despite strenuous efforts of officials to have it in tip-top condition.

It may be that Earl Smart's Epworth Seniors had been saving up for the occasion or it may be that Hap Applegett had gone far enough as an undefeated hurler in No. 1 league softball but whichever it was the Seniors clouted Hap Applegett to the east corners of the Steam shovel diamond yesterday and gave the Baptists the first beating of the season. The Methodists didn't do any half way job of the business at hand. The final score was 7-1.

Something Let Loose
Hap started the Baptists off in good fashion in the first frame, shutting out the Seniors with no hits but in the second inning the bats broke and when it had finally subsided the Seniors had a pair of runs, enough to win the ball game. They didn't stop here though for the two run lead was just enough to whet their appetite for some more counters. Accordingly they waited around until the seventh inning and then staged another scoring spree that left the Baptists wondering if the war was really over. Edgington contributed the prize hit of the evening by smashing one for the circuit.

Bryant Cady allowed the Baptists only five hits, three of them coming in the third frame.

Clark Loos Again
If any one should take the trouble to ask John Clark when his team is going to win a ball game, he will tell you.

Modern Woodmen Team Defeats Silk Mill, 5-4

The Woodmen will clash with the Gas company line on Friday at the Steam shovel athletic field at 4 p. m. M. B. Husted is captain of the Woodmen team.

Loses Court Battle To Stop Championship Bout

By The Associated Press
CLEVELAND, O., June 16.—Max Schmeling and Young Stribling were able to settle down to serious training today untroubled by legal obstacles to their heavyweight championship bout here July 3.

The state supreme court removed the only legal hurdle yesterday by refusing to advance for immediate hearing the injunction suit brought by Attorney Joseph H. Mollen in the regular order of events, the hearing would not be held until after the court returns from its summer vacation in September.

HARRIS WORRIED AS TIGERS CONTINUE TO THROW AWAY GAMES

Detroit Drops 20 of Last 23 Stars; Injuries Sap Hitting Power.

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer
The plight of the Detroit Tigers has become a serious matter to followers of the team.

Due largely to injuries to Dale Alexander and Charley Gehring, the Tigers have lost the greatest part of their batting punch and the work of the rest of the team has suffered accordingly. Today they had dropped to last place in the American league standing with a record of 12-20.

Harris, who had not played as a regular since he went to Detroit even went into the lineup shakily in one of his numerous shakeups and for a while in yesterday's game against Philadelphia, it looked as if the move might have brought success. Bucky cracked out a double in the third inning to start a two-run rally and the Tigers led up to the seventh inning. Then young Tom Bridges weakened badly. Waite Hoyt relieved him and the Tigers committed four errors. As a result, the Athletics scored 10 runs in two innings to win 12 to 3.

The victory did not increase Philadelphia's margin of leadership, however. For Washington's Senators defeated the Chicago White Sox 9 to 3. The other two American league games were rained out.

The Cincinnati Reds, who have been making a determined effort to climb out of the National league cellar made six victories in their last seven games yesterday by trouncing the Boston Braves 7 to 2.

The New York Giants accomplished the day's big killing as they took second place away from the Chicago Cubs with a 10 to 2 triumph going a full game ahead of their rivals.

The league leading St. Louis Cardinals collected as many safe hits, their largest total of the season, as they held their 4½ game margin with an 8 to 5 victory over Brooklyn.

Philadelphia exchanged places with Pittsburgh in the standing, going into sixth with a 7 to 3 victory. Chuck Klein's fourteenth home run of the season brought about the downfall of Ervin.

HEAVY TRACK CUTS SPEED OF HORSES

Peter at Law Shows Heels to Pack in Opening Event, 2:18 Pace, in 2:08 1-2.

WITH approximately 3,000 spectators in the stands the first 1931 Marion meeting of the Ohio Short Ship racing association got under way yesterday at the fairground. With the track slightly heavy due to recent rains the time in the three events of the day was not exceptionally fast.

The crowd of 3,000 exceeded the officials' expectations for opening day although it must be noted that a considerable number of them were women, admitted free as part of the opening day program.

Peter at Law, owned by Dale Baker of Aramun, O., and piloted by Beasley, added a victory to his rapidly increasing list of wins for the 1931 season by stepping out in straight heats to win the opening event of the day, the 2 1/8 class pace. Drawing the pole position, the black horse took the lead at the start and held it throughout the first heat despite some good hard efforts in the stretch by Czar Mobil, who finished in second place. Peter at Law looked entirely too good for the rest of the 18 class entries. Czar Mobil was the only horse able to offer him serious competition.

The boys who like to play the long shots had their lining in the second race, the 2-24 class trot. Rose Volo who was listed far down in the odds staged a brilliant battle on the stretch to nose out Nella Guy for the first heat and then stepped out in the second heat of the same race and won the mile without difficulty. Nella Guy, the favorite to take the race got off to a bad start and finished the first heat sixth.

In the third heat with Rose Volo ruled out for having won the previous two heats, Nella Guy romped around the oval to turn in a time for the heat which was 2:14 1/2, equalling the best time turned in by Rose Volo.

Another outsider came through with flying colors in the closing event of the day, the 2-24 class pace. Jimmy Strathmore piloted by Fitzpatrick, came in fast on the

WASHINGTON SPURTS LATE IN RACE AND BEATS PIONEER CREW

Marietta Boat Race Spectators Enthused Over Success of Rowing Venture.

By James L. Renick
Associated Press Sports Writer
MARHETTA, O., June 16.—Marietta and southern Ohio have seen their first eight-oared intercollegiate shell race, and liked it. Liked it so much, in fact, that a concentrated effort has been started to obtain the Olympic trials for the Ohio river course just west of here, next summer. Results of the effort are problematical. However, several college rowers are reported to favor the move.

Yesterday evening more than 10,000 persons lined the West Virginia and Ohio banks of the river to see the University of Washington freshmen and varsity crews defeat the Marietta college oarsmen in the first shell races ever held in this section of the country.

Less experienced and lighter than the Washington Huskies, the Marietta fight made a game race of it, Washington winning the two mile event by about 10 feet, drawing even and passing the Pioneers in the last 100 yards. The huskies covered the distance in eight minutes and one-half second, excellent time for the flat water of the Ohio.

Marietta flashed across the starting line first and held a three-quarter length lead until the mile mark was reached. There Johnny Ginger, Washington stroke, increased his lead to pull even with the Pioneers only to have the Ohioans spurt and open up a length lead which they held until the last few yards.

The huskies' first victory on the program was acquired with some ease, its crack freshman crew outdistancing the Marietta jayvees by two and three-quarter lengths, finishing the mile and a half race in 6:04.45. At no time was the far western crew forced to extend itself taking the lead at the start and holding to a steady pace that wore down the Marietta youngsters.

The Washington crews departed from here last night after the races for Highlands, N. Y., where they will complete their training for the intercollegiate at Poughkeepsie, June 18.

Vosmik Breaks Batting Slump Against Grove

NEW YORK, June 16.—Vosmik, about the classiest rookie of the 1931 season, has Lefty Grove to thank for pulling him out of batting slump a few weeks ago that was threatening to ruin his first season in the majors.

Joe came up to Cleveland, spring from slow minor league company, and for weeks he was everything. He was the spring station, another Ty Cobb, hitter plus.

"Then one day," says Joe, "I marched up there and I couldn't hit a thing. I couldn't follow up and I couldn't hit a fast one. I laid it right on my bat."

"The tough thing about a slump," explained Vosmik, "is that you get to fighting the bat and the bat gets worse. When you're fighting you don't think about a thing. You go right out there and slug."

"I sat on the bench while Lefty Grove came to bat with the Athletics. The first time I batted against him he hit the ball by me. I never saw a thing like it. The only thing I do was shorten my swing a punch at the ball. I barely pulled the bat into one of his fireballs. It bounced off the right field fence for a double. The next time I met it again, another hit. The slump was over. I've been hitting ever since."

He's meeting the ball every now and he's hitting .350. He expects to wind up the season under that mark.
